KI AUXILIARY TO MEET

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Congregation Knesses Israel will hold its closing luncheon meeting on Monday, June 11, at the synagogue.

A $20,000 spurt this past week in pledges brought the total in the 1956 dual campaign of the Jewish Welfare Federation as of Tuesday to $465,000. This sum includes $358,220 subscribed to the regular fund and $107,780 to the special emergency fund.

The drive shows an average increase of 49 per cent over last year, officials stated. The Women's division, with cards still out, has thus far raised $58,911, a 29 per cent increase over 1955. The Business and Professional group with $25,877 in pledges, shows an increase of 59 per cent and General Solicitations with $19,150, leads all divisions with a 70 per cent increase.

In view of the United Jewish Appeal National Action conference on June 9 and 10 in New York which was called to assess the status of both the regular campaigns and the special emergency fund, local campaign officials are particularly anxious to present as complete and favorable a picture of the 1956 drive as possible and are asking workers to solicit and turn in unreported cards this week.

The president said that several new appointments to the board will be made during the summer adjournment, announcement of which will be made when the group re-convenes in September.

A PICNIC is being planned for sometime in July. Members will be notified by mail of the time, place, and date.

Among the NAPTEENERS

By IRWIN PRINCE, WA 3-9663 — 3642 Winthrop Avenue

ANNE FRANK and SHARON NAPERS

Two more teen-agers, Sharon Napers and Anne Frank, have asked to try out for writing this column next year. This week's entry is entirely their work, and they would appreciate any criticism or comment you may want to make. Anyone else wishing to try out will be given the same opportunity to write a future column and have it printed in The POST.—IRWIN PRINCE.

Gossip is what you asked for and that's exactly what we are going to try and give you.

The main topic of conversation last week-end was the Confirmation Dance, which was held at the Continental hotel. The music of Vic Knight was enjoyed by all present. Heard outside Napers' window at 3 o'clock were those leaving Judy Segal's open house. Some found their way to Nancy Fichman's closed breakfast. For all those confirmands, it will certainly be a night to remember.

ENJOYING THE smell of hogs and cows last Thursday were the Biology II students who journeyed to Lynnwood farm. I am sure that we are now experts in the agricultural field. Do you all know the difference between clean and dirty mud?

Our congratulations go to Nancy Fichman who was the runner-up in the Shortridge spelling bee, and to all those who participated in it.

The late arrival of spring has not dampened the spirits of the sports-minded people. It was off to the races for some Nap-teeners.

FOR THOSE who were not lucky enough to go to the Speedway, the Deb-ette club gave a dance with "500 Fling" as the theme. The dance chairmen, Phyllis Bluestein and Babs Berman, certainly did a wonderful job. During intermission we all enjoyed a quick trip around the United States provided by those talented girls in the entertainment program, directed by Mrs. Max Zimet.

We hope that Stella Bryan has recuperated from her various travels. Within a short period of six days she attended a dance in Terre Haute with Julius Loeser, and a prom in Dayton with Dave Wasserman.

THIS WEEK-END many of those from Naptown will have a terrific time at the Temple Teen conclave. Saturday night is an installation dinner and dance honoring the new officers. The out-going president is Shel Cooper.

As of today, we have only eight more days of school while those lucky graduates have only five. Students are still suffering from "term paperitis" although many such manuscripts have been handed in. (Thank heavens!)

As this week's guest writers we decided to add something different to this column. Therefore we have put together what we consider the ideal girl and boy.

OUR IDEAL GIRL

Hair, Nancy Dock; eyes, Carole Moscovitz; nose, Marcia, Elaine, Barbara, Rozie, Janis, Anne, and Sharon; lips, Roberta Goldstein; ears, Carol Shane; complexion, Judy Sachs; facial expression, Sharon Maurer; arms, Frances Frisch; hands, Linda Abraham; figure, Bari Gold; legs, Jane Russell (Sorry girls, none of you fit.); ankles, Carole Schamberg; height, Jayne Blickman; and personality, Nancy Regenstreif.

OUR IDEAL BOY

Hair, Buffy Cohen; eyes, Mike Schuchman; nose, Joey Goldfarb (Are the rest of you chicken?); lips, We wouldn't know!!; ears, Benny Goldstein; complexion, Paul Schwartz; facial expression, Howie Lichtenberg; arms, Myron Budnick; hands, Steve Leve; physique, Mike and Shel; legs, Irwin Prince; ankles, Norman Goldman; height, Howard Zuckerman; and personality, Melvyn Goldstein.

WE WOULD like to take this space to thank Irwin for the opportunity to write his usual column. We certainly enjoyed it, and would like to hear your comments.

We leave you with this thought for the week, "No news is good news!"

Blaustein Clarifies Mid-East Statement

CLEVELAND (NJP)—Despite the cease fire agreement, there is a possibility that war may break out in the Middle East unless Israel has adequate defensive arms to protect itself.

This is the opinion of Jacob Blaustein, honorary president of the American Jewish Committee.

The POST (NJP May 18) reported that Blaustein, in a speech before the AJC executive board, urged western nations to be ready to strike back if Arab nations attack.

Blaustein said this week that this remark was misinterpreted. He urged western nations sell defensive arms to Israel, but did not say there was need for them to take part in military action.

Mori Sa'id Termed Best Modern Novel About Life In Israel

MORI SA'ID by Hayim Hazaz, translated from the Hebrew by Ben Halpern. Abelard-Schuman, $4.00.

The best modern novel about life in Israel so far available in English is this story of a Yemenite family in Jerusalem, by one of Israel's foremost writers. And it has been translated with

LEVIN

HERE WE ARE not dealing with the halutzim of old, or and beguiles him into making a good named Sion, the son of the sage, who comes to Mori Alfekeh loan of 10 gold pounds for Sion to buy goods and go into business. Sion promises the return of the money, doubled, on the day Messiah comes.

At home, Sion has a wife and many children, living in a hovel, and an almost-grown daughter, the lovely Romyeh who, like her mother, does housework for the European Jews, the holders of jobs in the national offices, the owners of banks and shops.

THE SAGE has a listener and disciple, an artisan named Mori Alfekeh, who is easily convinced by symbols and dream-interpretations that the Messiah will come on a certain day, only a few weeks off. And alas, taking advantage of this faith is a no-good named Sion, the son of the sage, who comes to Mori Alfekeh loan of 10 gold pounds for Sion to buy goods and go into business. Sion promises the return of the money, doubled, on the day Messiah comes.

AND SHE DOES meet a lad, also of Yemen, who speaks to her of going to a kibbutz. But they nearly break up when she begs him for the sake of form, and to please her mother, to send a match-maker to the house. However, in the end, love and form get together and this third generation takes part in the upbuilding of the land, that they have heard so much about.

But, meanwhile, the second generation in the person of Sion engages in all sorts of wickedness and good times. "Never had Sion such good days as those days with the cash in his pocket. Every day he drank arak and ate fat meat . . ." but not a crumb from the cash went to his wife and children. Such imprecations as his drudging wife hears on Sion have not been heard, even from the best Yiddish authors.

SION DOES not entirely neglect business opportunity. He purchases an ancient donkey with a bit of the borrowed money, and falls into a business of giving rides to Australian soldiers, who, on leave in Jerusalem during the war, are generous with their shillings.

Sion becomes a man about town, and even has a love affair with a widow, but eventually she goes off to Tel Aviv, and marries an Arab in Jaffa, and Sion loses not only his love but his donkey, and returns to his scolding wife in time to take over the profits that his children have made in selling Eskimo Pies on Jerusalem's streets.

As for the aged Mori Sa'id, he is scarcely aware of the strange results of his Messianic predictions, for he has taken it upon himself to go down to the Wall and sit as a beggar, and exert his profoundest prayers, to bring down Messiah in the time of need. And there he ends his days.

Hasten to read of him. In his story, too, is the real Israel.

Building Plans For Reform School In Israel Held Up

By CHARLES ROTH

Israel Bureau Chief, National Jewish POST

JERUSALEM (NJP)—The Jerusalem building and planning commission has approved the plans for the HUC-JIR Rabbinical and Archaeological school this week but it was returned to committee at the request of Agudah

The Deputy Mayor denied any wish to block the Reform school. He said that he only wishes to check the plans for the building, which call for a two- or three-story building containing an auditorium, library, room for repairing antiquities, a garage, and caretakers' quarters.

THE ORTHODOX here agree that the HUC-JIR has every right to build any establishment which meets the specifications of the building commission and zoning laws. They may seek assurances, however, that the Sabbath will be observed in Orthodox fashion within the building as in all public buildings in Israel.

The big controversy though revolves about the type of services that will be conducted in the building and to what degree they will serve outsiders. The Orthodox would like to prevent any Reform congregation or services and although HUC-JIR president Nelson Glueck has given repeated assurances that he is not establishing a Reform congregation, Reform services at the school will be tantamount to the same thing.

IF THE SCHOOL will inaugurate a Reform service it will hardly be the first in Israel. Besides the Reform Congregation Emet Vemunah led by Rabbi Philip which conducts a regular Orthodox service, a group has been meeting in a private home conducting a service which allows women to receive an "aliyah" to the Torah. Whether this will be looked upon as a Reform or Conservative congregation remains to be seen. In Israel any deviation from the traditional is looked upon as Reform.

Another deviation is a congregation along Conservative lines in Haifa which meets in a classroom of the Bet Sefer Reali.

The majority of non-Orthodox in Israel still show very little inclination for organized religion of any kind. However, a significant number of people, especially in intellectual circles have begun to show great interest in some kind of religious expression.

Abba Silver's Son To Aid Father

By IRVING GRAY

National Jewish POST Correspondent

CLEVELAND, (NJP)—When the high holy days arrive next September, Rabbi Daniel Jeremy Silver of Chicago will be starting a new year and a new life.

He'll be a newly married man starting on a new job as an associate rabbi on the staff on the Temple, a congregation that his father, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, has headed for 39 years.

"It is thrilling to me and I am deeply gratified to have my son associated with me," said senior Rabbi Silver, responding like a proud father should.

The young rabbi, who is 28, has been the leader of Chicago's Beth Torah congregation since 1954. He was born and educated here and graduated from Harvard University. He was ordained in 1952 upon graduation from Hebrew Union College—Jewish Institute of Religion.

He will be married in July to Miss Adele Zeidman who now is on the staff of the New York Times. She formerly lived in Birmingham, Ala.

Rabbi and Mrs. Silver have another son, Raphael, who is a business man here.

OBITUARIES

H. Rosenwasser, Detroit Rabbi, 71

DETROIT (NJP)—Rabbi Herman Rosenwasser, 71, the spiritual leader for 17 years of Detroit's Downtown Synagogue, died Thursday, May 17.

Rabbi Rosenwasser took a deep interest in downtown Jewish residents and endeared himself to thousands of out-of-town guests, who, while at downtown hotels, were able to participate in services in the Downtown Synagogue, recite kaddish on yahrzeits, or attend yizkor services on holidays.

A graduate of Hebrew Union college, he held pulpits in the southwest before coming to Detroit.

Rabbi David Almond

LOS ANGELES (NJP)—Rabbi David Almond, who served in a number of Conservative temples in Chicago during the past 50 years, died here Monday, May 21. He was author of several books. Surviving him are a son, Dr. Gabriel Almond, professor of international affairs at Princeton university, and three daughters.

ORTHODOX MAY DECIDE ON PARTICIPATION ISSUE

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NJP)—What is the biggest question facing the rabbinate of the United States may or may not be decided at the convention here next week of the Rabbinical Council of America (Orthodox).

The question, debated heatedly in rabbinical circles for the past few months, is whether Orthodox Rabbis shall continue to serve on rabbinical bodies in which Reform and Conservative Rabbis hold memberships.

There has been a behind-the-scenes movement to postpone any decision on the question, but consideration of the problem is on the agenda for the four-day confab. No one will say so, but the Tuesday night session which is to be addressed by what may be two persons holding differing views, seems the likely spot for the showdown.

Rabbi Samuei Belkin, president of Yeshiva U., who has indicated that he is opposed to the ban and Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik who is head of the Halacha (Law) Committee of the RCA are scheduled for addresses that night. Rabbi Soloveitchik's committee has been considering the problem since it was referred to it following its proposal by Rabbi David B. Hollander (NJP, Feb. 18, 1956). Rabbi Hollander is RCA president.

Also on the program for the convention are addresses by Ambassador Abba Eban, Harold Stassen, Rabbi Irving Miller and others.

Summer Vacation Guide

This vacation guide, the only one of its kind in the Jewish field, will be printed periodically throughout the year as a service to our readers. There is no charge for inclusion in this guide, and resorts and hotels may submit data for publication, although final decision will rest with The Post. Where swimming, tennis or golf is listed, these are on the premises. The final number is the telephone, and where no prefix is shown, is the same as the town where the resort is located. Only those resorts which advertise as strictly kosher are so designated, although, of course, The Post takes no responsibility for these statements. The name in the text is that of the proprietor. The rates are maximum and minimum by the week, unless otherwise stated.

ONE RABBI PUTS A HEX ON ANOTHER

Two Rabbis Clash In Dispute About Witchcraft and Magic

By LEO HEIMAN

National Jewish POST Correspondent

HAIFA (NJP)—It is hard to believe that there are rabbis in enlightened and modern Israel who still have faith in witchcraft and practice the Medieval arts of black-magic, but it's true. The fact is that two Israeli rabbis are now locked in a court struggle over witchcraft and black-magic, and most Israeli papers are devoting more space to their dispute than to politics, and crime news.

It began when Rabbi Ovadia Moshe Barty, the rabbi of Akron (a village ten miles south-east of Tel Aviv, no kin to Ohio), cursed a Tel Aviv rabbi named Meoded Barzilai-Sharabi, and sent letters to the editorial offices of Israel's biggest papers notifying them of the curse, which read, in part:

"I curse you in the name of God and the Holy Torah. May your hands, feet, stomach and head be splintered and broken, may all your limbs be torn away from your body, and may you be buried deep in the earth from where devils may take you deep into Hell, where your toes and fingers will be cut off, your eyes gouged out, and your brain weakened with fever... May your skin blacken, your tongue wither, your bones rot and your teeth fall out... May Almighty God punish you and curse you forever. Amen, Amen, Amen..."

THE EDITORS sensed a sensation. The curse was printed in some papers just as it was received, without comments, but the following day, all papers were full of the cursed rabbi's side of the story.

According to the Tel Aviv rabbi, everything began four years ago, when Hemdah Barzilai-Sharabi, the Tel Aviv rabbi's wife, fell ill with some strange sickness which doctors were unable to diagnose.

Rabbi Meoded, hearing from some acquaintances that the village rabbi of Akron had cured some women in the past, went to see Rabbi Barty.

The latter according to Rabbi Bartz said he could help the reb-betzin.

Rabbi Meoded related that the two rabbis prayed for a while, following which Rabbi Barty lit a "blessed fire," said some more prayers over it, burned some slips of paper with prayers, magic words and kabbalistic formulas printed on them, stirred the ashes, and produced a type-written letter from the fire. This letter, Rabbi Barty solemnly declared, was directly from God, the Tel Aviv rabbi said.

In good modern Hebrew, this typewritten letter guaranteed health and well-being as well as happiness to its bearer, and Rabbi Barty explained that he was in direct contact with Archangels Gabriel and Michael.

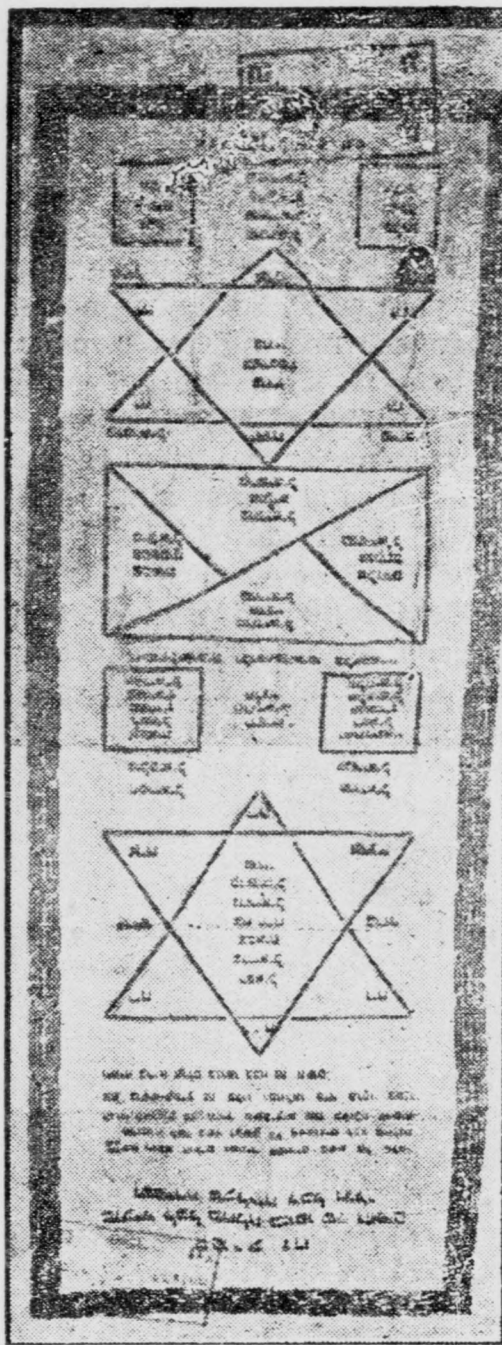

At first, Rabbi Meoded was frankly sceptical, but since he loved his wife and was pretty desperate by that time, he took the letter and handed it to Hemdah, his wife.

And then the miracle happened. The rebbetzin recovered within a few days and became perfectly well. Consulted by the newspapers, the doctors say now that the mysterious sickness was psychological, and that Hemdah was cured by the psychological impact of having a "letter from God" delivered to her.

In any case, Rabbi Meoded did not doubt Rabbi Barty's magic powers after Hemdah's recovery.

Rabbi Meoded, a rich man, who was a rabbinical judge as well as a rabbi, and who was a graduate of Tel Aviv's Hattkvah yeshiva, became very friendly with Rabbi Barty of Akron village, who refused payment for delivering the "God's letter" to Rabbi Meoded.

One day, however, Rabbi Barty invited Rabbi Meoded to his home and most solemnly declared: "The Almighty God informed me through (Archangel) Michael that you, Rabbi Meoded-Barzilai-Sharabi of Tel Aviv, will find a great treasure, full of gold and precious stones. To find it, however, you must give me twelve thousand pounds for distribution to the poor..."

Rabbi Meoded sold an ice factory he owned and handed Rabbi Barty the 12,000 pounds (about $6,800) following which he found, after being guided by Rabbi Barty, three heavy suitcases, wrapped in brown packing paper, on which the following was written in Hebrew: "This is Messiah's own treasure. Do not open before two years have passed."

Rabbi Meoded waited patiently for two years. On D-Day when he opened them, he found the suitcases filled with stones, rubble and gravel.

He immediately ran to Rabbi Barty and demanded his money back. However, the Akron rabbi said he had heard of the misfortune from (Archangel) Michael. He said the rabbi, must have sinned during the two years, and God turned the gold into stones and the precious jewels into gravel. Rabbi Meoded related.

Rabbi Barty lit another "blessed fire," he went on, and produced another letter from God, which declared that Rabbi Meoded Barzilai-Sharabi was picked to be the Messiah, if he went to a certain old grave in Tiberias and fasted there for forty days.

EVERYTHING WOULD have been fine if it weren't for the fact that Rabbi Meoded met some other people who had been taken in by Rabbi Barty for sums of money totalling some twenty thousand pounds.

Whereupon, Rabbi Meoded took Rabbi Barty to court for extortion of money under false pretenses.

Rabbi Barty declared that it was Rabbi Meoded who set himself up as the false Messiah, and cursed him in the way mentioned above. Thus the entire matter rests, for the time being, until the court decides the case.

Few Try To Guess New Mystery Person

No one guessed the new Mystery Person which started out last week. In fact, very few people made an attempt. The second hint is printed below.

The second hint is:

The Mystery Person declared in 1952 that: "Every Jew... has the privilege and obligation, according to my opinion, to express his opinion on everything that happens in Israel, and criticize that which requires criticism."

The first hint was:

"Our only wish for American Jewry is to see it free, stable and secure."

A new problem has arisen in connection with the contest, which probably will be aggravated this week in view of the fact that The POST is being put to press a day earlier—Tuesday instead of Wednesday—because of the Memorial Day holiday.

Occasionally guesses reach our office after the paper has already been put to press. Fortunately none of the late guesses, all with postmarks earlier than the Monday and Tuesday deadline, have been correct. But in the last contest, that in which the Mystery Person was Jacob Blaustein, a late guess named him correctly. This was on the first hint. By the time the readers had a chance to see the second hint, four others named the Baltimore industrialist accurately.

This is the problem: To have told the four who guessed correctly on the second hint that their answers had to be ruled out because an answer which arrived in the office the previous week but too late to catch the paper for that week had deduced who the Mystery Person was from the first hint, would have caused only hard feelings. Yet the person who did answer correctly on the first hint has a legitimate case, too.

What shall we do? We can't pay double the prize money, and we can't run the contest every other week, which would give ample time for all the replies to reach us before the next hint was provided. We might move the deadline back to Sunday night, but this would penalize the readers who do not get their copies until Monday.

Any suggestions will be welcomed.

The rules are: The Mystery person will be a living Jew, who is known for activity within the Jewish community. The Mystery Person may be a man or woman and can live in any part of the world:

Prize money is $25.00, but each week a new hint will be given, while the prize money will be reduced by $5.00 until the final week when only $5.00 will be offered.

Replies must be on the official coupon blank in this week's paper, and must be postmarked not later than Monday, June 4 (or Tuesday, June 5), if the reader lives west of Denver, Colo.). In case of a tie, the prize money will be divided equally among those answering correctly. Answers should be addressed to The Mystery Person Contest, National Jewish Post, Post Office Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

THE ARTS

Sculptress Tessa Rakosh, Recovered From Her Illness, Thanks Those Who Helped Her

By JOSEPH GALE

Most of you will remember Tessa Rakosh, the Israeli sculptress and artist, who had such a difficult time of it some months back and is now recovered from the illness which struck her polio-wasted figure. A number of you contributed a total of several hundred dollars toward her assistance, and herewith is her reply, which came to us the other day:

DEAR MR. GALE:

On this occasion, I would like to express my thanks for all you have done for me, for your kind understanding of my situation and all my problems. By writing the articles about me, you have entered into my fate and changed it for the better.

GALE

I have many friends, and, among my best friends, Miss Emmy Herrmann went through a great deal of trouble trying to help me while I was in the hospital. Through her, you received the material about me. While I was in the hospital, I thought how can I possibly continue to live and work as hard as I did before, without getting sick from it again.

YOU CAN imagine how surprised I was when I left the hospital and heard from my friends that at present I don't have to worry myself, because when your articles were printed they met with such a great success that it is difficult to describe. I still feel the results of this success today.

Today, I am completely well. I have begun working at the point where I left off, my outlook is much more optimistic than it was, and I know that a large part of this favorable change is due to your generosity. For this, I want to thank everybody for the various forms of help they gave me, and for the lovely letters. I also want to thank the paper for having given space and time to the articles about me.

Sincerely,
TESSA RAKOSH.

IN ANSWER to our query as to why, specifically, she wants to come to this country for a year or two, Tessa replied that she desires, first of all, to continue her studies and is also eager to take courses in ceramics, "because it is easier to earn a living with such work."

Then, she understands, the United States is a leader in polio therapy, "and naturally I want to do everything possible." Thirdly, Tessa wrote, she wants to exhibit her work, examples of which she will bring with her.

AS YOU KNOW, one of Tessa's many benefactors offered to guarantee her passage provided that she would be looked after and taken care of. This is the problem her friends are now trying to settle. Once before, a call went out for your opinions and views, and we make it now again. Please address the writer at 415 Westminster Ave., Elizabeth, N. J.

They Say

Israel is today the most completely social democratic State in the world.—Hugh Gaitskell, head of the British Labor Party at the 5th anniversary celebration of the Workmen's Circle.

It is not to our credit that, in return for airbase privileges in Saudi Arabia, we yield to the dictates of a totalitarian government as to who can wear an American uniform on the airbase. In my judgment, it would be better to have no base in Saudi Arabia than to yield to the dictate that no Jew can serve our country on that base.—Sen. Wayne Morse at the dinner for Boys' Town, Jerusalem, honoring board chairman Ira Guilden.

I once listened to women comparing recipes, and one woman said "Canned gefilte fish doesn't have the same taste as those you make yourself." Its true—nothing canned, nothing ready-made is as good as what you do yourself. Too much of our Judaism is canned Judaism. The rabbi reads, the cantor and choir sing—and many a congregation sits back mutely, passively. The service goes along automatically. We are not exerting ourselves in it. It is our singing, our praying, our exerting ourselves which will deepen the experience for us and make it meaningful.—Rabbi Ben Zion Bokser.

But the greatest obstacle, I have found, is the tendency on the part of members of the family to ridicule the idea when a young man expresses a desire to study for the ministry. Often parents will discourage a son because they are overly conscious concerning their own religious shortcomings.—Rabbi Joseph Klein.

Americans Weigh Motives Before Moving To Israel

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA—The number of Americans going to settle in Israel is still very small, but those who are interested in encouraging a larger American immigration might to advantage analyze the motives which have impelled others of us to come to this land. Motivations are almost always mixed, and in all likelihood, a combination of causes has operated in most instances.

ALPERT

of a Jewish life in a Jewish land.

There are some Americans here who have come out of what they sense as fulfillment of a historic destiny. They have been thrilled by the creation of the State of Israel, and they are not satisfied with being passively Jewish; they want to do something about it, and the creative opportunities in Israel appeal to them.

There are others who take Judaism seriously, and wish to experience the fullest possible spiritual satisfaction. Even as Orthodox Jews, many wish to go beyond merely the customs and ceremonies, and come to grips with the realities of a Jewish life in a Jewish land.

For many there is a pioneering urge seeking fulfillment. Frontiers, where they still exist, are limited, and there seem to be no new worlds to conquer. Israel offers the chance to do, to create. Here is a country that is looking for new blood, fresh talents and skills, ideas—and anyone with an ounce of ability or initiative can find full satisfaction in his work. Perhaps this is how the pioneers of America's midwest felt a century and more ago, when they left the Eastern Seaboard to seek elbow room.

Some Like Jewish Environment

Then there are those who like a Jewish environment. They may never have experienced any anti-Semitism; they do not consider themselves fugitives from anybody or anything, but of their own free will have come to a land where Jews are in the majority, and where the atmosphere and environment and culture are of their creation. They rebel against a situation where they have to adapt themselves to the ways of a majority which has set its imprint on the culture and life of the country and where—cultural pluralism notwithstanding—conformism is increasingly demanded.

Some of the Americans in Israel will tell you that they have come to live here for the sake of the children. They don't want the youngsters to grow up with Jewish complexes of any kind. They don't want to struggle to provide a Jewish education in an environment which pulls in another direction. They don't want the kiddies to have any feelings of insecurity or inferiority, even if imagined.

There are Americans here whose motives are basically economic. Among these are the elderly who have reached the age where energy and ambition no longer count. They have lived a long and full life and wish to retire. Even with relatively modest funds, they can live comfortably in Israel, and always among friends and among their own kind.

Perhaps you can think of other factors which enter into the picture—factors which have perhaps stirred your own imagination, though you may never have dared to pursue the issue to logical conclusions.

International Move Requires Consideration

It is difficult enough to change jobs, to move from one city to another; but a voluntary move from one country to another is something that requires the most careful consideration. It should not be hurried.

And so many American Jews think, and consider and dream, and the months pass into years, and fulfillment never comes.

If you are among those who have given even fleeting thoughts to these matters, or if you know of people who have, you should be interested in a brand-new pamphlet which has just come off the press. It is entitled "Guide to a New Life—A Handbook for Those Who Plan To Live In Israel." Its 70 pages contain an elaboration of the discussion with which this column opens; they include warnings as to types of people who should not consider coming to Israel, and the material leads, step by step through all the stages of consideration, decision, and necessary preparation.

It is a handsome little pocket-size pamphlet, and it is free for the asking. You need only address your request for "Guide to a New Life" to Patwa, 16 E. 66th St., New York, N. Y., and a copy will be sent without charge.

I think you will find it a valuable pamphlet; I hope you will find it interesting. I can recommend almost every word in it—because I wrote it.

Moving To Suburbs
By Jews Defended

One thing for sure in this family. You can count on us being interested in most of the activities going on around here, what with one or another of our children taking part. Next week our 14-year-old will be graduated from Hebrew school. A couple of weeks ago our 15-year-old was Confirmed from Sunday school. This week we attended the closing exercises of our 4-year-old's kindergarten. Next fall, God-willing, we hope to watch as our 6-year-old takes part in the beginner consecration exercises in the synagogue. And so it goes.

The Sunday school confirmation, I must say, was most impressive, if only for the size, the largest ever, of the class, 44. Though I couldn't help but bear in mind that this meant 44 more of the young people were now through with their formal Jewish studies and most of their contact with the synagogue and other religious institutions. And, I repeat, I would like to see that postponed at least for another year.

At the closing exercises of the kindergarten which is sponsored by the community Hebrew school, I was impressed, once again, with how much can be instilled into the little ones of love and knowledge of Judaism and things Jewish merely by song and play and story. Especially where there is no conflict with a non-Jewish environment. The older children, taught one set of ideas—about Easter and Christmas—in the schools and then expected, tired and restive by school's closing, to absorb their Jewish training in the afternoon sessions, couldn't possibly respond as do these young 4- and 5-year-olds.

And I was impressed, too, with the quality of the songs our little ones sang for the benefit of admiring parents. As I listened, I could sense that the strains were old familiar Jewish melodies combined with lyrics that were fresh and gay and that the children enjoyed singing. Some of the songs their teacher, Mrs. Clara Robbins, had composed herself, or adopted from other sources.

Several of these can be found in the new anthology collected by Judith Eisenstein "Songs of Childhood" published by the United Synagogue, which, if on the same high level of excellence, I can certainly recommend for other kindergarten classes.

All these activities may keep a mother happy, but they still come under the heading of pure nachas-watching as children progress toward maturity.

If reader Isi Hepner in last week's POST felt I was naive to decide it was uncalled-for prejudice to rule that a mother remained unclean twice as long if she bore a female child than a male offspring, what must he think of former Chief Rabbi of the British Empire, Dr. J. H. Hertz, who in his Commentary on the Pentateuch wrote that "there is no satisfactory explanation why the period is doubled when a female child is born. It cannot be because a female was regarded as more defiling than a male, since the mother's purification was the same for either sex."

Rabbi William Greenburg of Temple Beth El in Allentown was this week end signally honored on the occasion of his 50th birthday and his 25th year in the rabbinate.

In a surprise ceremony on Friday night with 700 people present, a Torah was presented in his name to the Temple. The rabbi was visibly touched. "At this moment," he said, "I remember all my sins."

Rabbi Max Artz of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, who gave the sermon, remarked that he had rarely witnessed such religious fervor on the part of a congregation or such an outpouring of love for its rabbi.

On Saturday morning, Rabbi Greenburg was surprised and honored again by the children of the Junior Congregation who set up an honor award in his name to be presented to the outstanding graduating student each year. They turned the tables on the rabbi and called him to the Torah. Then there was a huge birthday cake.

On Sunday evening there was a testimonial dinner when the rabbi was praised again by the president of the temple in Charlotte, N. C., where he officiated before he came to Allentown.

The ceremonies were climaxed when the doors were opened to reveal the cantor singing with the new Torah in his arms. The rabbi was escorted to the pulpit where he inscribed the last two words in the unfinished Torah (siyyim ha Torah).

The whole week end was an outpouring of love to the rabbi who has led Beth El in Allentown for the last 14 years and who was awarded a life-time contract two years ago. There were heart qvechin and there were tears—the kind you don't often get a chance to shed.

"I shall not forget the flavor of this week end till I draw my last breath," the rabbi said.

Juvenile Delinquency In U. S., Israel About Same

Negro Jurist Sees No Racial Bias In Israel

By CHARLES ROTH

Israel Bureau Chief, National Jewish POST
JERUSALEM (NJP)—Juvenile delinquency in Israel just about equals juvenile delinquency in the United States.

This was the comparative report received from Judge Hubert T. Delany, former judge of the Domestic Relations Court in New York, who is presently in Israel as the guest of the government to advise the Ministry of Justice on matters concerning juvenile problems.

THE COMPARATIVE figures should not be misinterpreted as showing Jewish juvenile delinquency in the United States as equal to juvenile delinquency here. Exactly the opposite is true, for Judge Delany knows that for its percentage of the population, Jews have a very small proportion of juvenile delinquents in the United States.

In fact, he lauded the Jewish federations whose pioneer work in combatting juvenile delinquency in the United States he said was responsible for the almost total absence of Jewish juvenile delinquency.

THE NEGRO jurist criticized the recent law passed by the Knesset which would punish the parents of juveniles involved in crime. He claimed the law would hardly reduce delinquency, while at the same time it would merely increase the backlog of cases before the courts.

Judge Delany praised the press of Israel and the community as a whole for its attitude toward children. He also was pleasantly surprised by the lack of criticism of progressive judges, whom he said would be blamed for "coddling" delinquents in the United States.

One remark of Judge Delany gratified the Israelis. He said that he found no racial prejudice in Israel and claimed that the absence of gang wars here like those in larger cities in the United States could be attributed to this lack of any major racial barriers.

Use Vacation Wisely

"I've always wanted to be a good tennis player."
"How I envy anyone who can play the piano!"
"Wish I knew how to drive a car."

JUDY

All these wishes could be realities if the wishers would apply a liberal dose of ambition to their two-and-a-half month summer vacation. Before the spring fever gives way to summer inertia, each should decide exactly what he would like most to accomplish by the end of August.

WITH A DEFINITE GOAL in mind, no day will be wasted, and each team will have more to show for the summer than a freckled nose.

Whether we will be camping in the mountains, or tallying sales checks behind a counter, each of us will still have an opportunity to develop ourselves in some new way.

Most cities have facilities to offer community art classes or music or drama groups. High schools often have summer driving courses, and city pools offer free swimming instruction. Golf and tennis are sometimes taught free of charge by public parks.

Make yourself into that good bridge player you have always admired. Find others who are ambitious beginners and practice together. The public library can supply you with "how-to" books on bridge, sports, and even creative activities.

PERHAPS your greatest accomplishment will concern your own character, or your relationship with family and friends. With over two months at your disposal you can cultivate courtesy, kindness and thoughtfulness if you have not already.

Write that story you have had at the back of your mind for months and send it to a magazine. Read the plays you have heard so much about. Try your hand at sewing a dress. Now that that pressure of school will be off you can devote time to all the activities you had to put aside during the academic year.

We hope that the first sign of autumn will bring not only memories of sun and summer fun, but also a deep sense of satisfaction—satisfaction in your own achievement.

If there is a special topic that would be of interest to teens over the country that you would like to see discussed in this column, write to Judy, 5023 North Pennsylvania, Indianapolis, Ind.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

Modern Delicatessen Factory Prepares Meat Just The Way Bobba Did

By SARAH LIEBER

With Memorial Day and warm weather, the picnic season is, at last, officially here. And while nashera! is always appetizing, somehow it becomes an essential part of outdoor living. There is something about the appetite whipped up by the air at the beach, lakeside or grassy hill that makes a hot dog or a salami sandwich an absolute must.

SARAH With that thought in mind I journeyed the other day to that colorful part of old New York which we call the Lower East Side.

THERE I was guest of what we used to call a "wurst fabrik," but is in reality much more than a plant manufacturing those maiholim which go by the name of provisions.

I was taken on a Cook's tour of the plant of the Schmulka Bernstein Company, one of our advertisers. And I wish my readers could have been with me.

It was interesting, indeed, to see how modern in its methods is a firm which is about to celebrate its 50th anniversary in the meat business.

THE PLANT is air conditioned and cheerful, yet in many respects the old-fashioned standards prevail. For example, when the rabbi who serves as mashgiah showed me through the rooms in which the meat is prepared, he carefully pointed out to me that the removal of veins (trabering) and the koshering of the meat is done in the old European method, by European-trained workers.

"Just the way your bobba did it," he pointed out.

THE SPICES, which I saw stored in great barrels, are natural spices. The wood used for smoking products contains a large amount of hickory—I saw the logs and talked with the keeper of the smokehouse, himself a Hollander, with the hereditary art of smoking kept secret from outsiders.

He offered me a frankfurter right out of the smoke oven. It was delectable.

IT WAS pointed out to me that the Bernstein Co. has recently been given inspection No. 971 by the government, and is now ready for wide-spread distribution.

As if I were a representative of all balabostas, I looked around to see things which were not pointed out to me. I saw the government grading stamps on the refrigerated meat.

In every instance, it was "prime" or "choice." Worth noting, I thought, and worth paying perhaps a little extra for.

I saw the hot water and detergent used to clean the grinders. I saw the floor flushed clean at intervals. And I saw the inspection of products.

THESE ARE THINGS a housewife is interested in, when her men are more concerned with flavor.

And for flavor, I am able to report that the frankfurters, salami, bologna and "fry beef," which I sampled were all of excellent flavor and quality. The fry beef, incidentally, I recommend as a breakfast dish with eggs, or fried and mixed with bread crumbs as topping for a casserole of meat and noodle left-overs.

YOU MAY remember that President Eisenhower was reported some months ago to be eating breakfast beef with his eggs, and enjoying it. This is the type of product which was meant.

The Schmulka Bernstein Co. handles other smoked meats as well. And they are in the fresh meat and frozen meats business, too.

They spoke with great pride of being selected by one of New York's leading department stores, Macy's, to supply the kosher frozen meat for the store's freezer-food plan. They do a large mail order business. And if you are interested in obtaining their products by mail, I suggest that you write them at 111 Rivington St., New York. And say Sarah likes their products.

A Word To The Wives

For picnicking or partying, how about laying in a supply of sliced corned beef, tongue, pastrami and rolled beef. With tomatoes sliced as needed, and bread or rolls, refreshments are easy on the hostess, and delightful to the guests.

Large diameter bologna, stripped of its casing, and the slices fried, will curl up at the sides and make most attractive cups in which to serve rice, macaroni with tomato sauce, or vegetables.

Pie crust, made with tomato sauce instead of water, and rolled a little thicker than usual, may be cut into strips and rolled around frankfurters. When these are baked they are a real maihol.

Tell the youngsters when they go on a cook-out, that franks wrapped in aluminum foil may be cooked directly over the fire without danger of scorching. Keeps the juices in, too.

They Tried To Collect
A Long- Standing Debt

By GEORGE VASS

IT HAS BEEN widely touted for some 16 years now that Louisville's greatest gift to Brooklyn has been that notable ex-champion of the ring, one Harold "Pee Wee" Reese.

Lest there be some unsophisticated skeptics among the readership, we hasten to add that Mr. Reese did not gain his crown campaigning as a prizefighter. The ring he excelled in was the one enrouding the marbles so prized in boyhood.

But Pee Wee's former ring skill is of small account these days. It is his shortstopping par excellence that has endeared him to the millions whose moods twist and turn with the fortunes of the Dodgers. They are indebted to his native town, which despite its situation in the wilds of Kentucky, has produced such a notable offspring.

IT IS ALMOST axiomatic in the realm of economics that when a debt exists it should be paid. Fully aware of this, several Jewish gentlemen of Louisville took it upon themselves to collect in return for Pee Wee Reese.

The University of Louisville in recent years has enjoyed more than modest success in basketball. Last season, in fact, the Cardinals captured the NIT championship. But despite their heroes' skill, several Jewish sports enthusiasts were depressed by the lack of Jewish athletes decorating the teams' uniforms.

Conspicuously successful in other fields of endeavor, these gentlemen were not the sort to idly sit by and let such a state of affairs continue. They determined to correct the grievous shortage of Jewish talent.

FIRST, they consulted Louisville's basketball coaches. The latter, whose very bread and butter depends on the success achieved by their minions, were understandably delighted at the public spirit shown by the worthy citizens. They readily agreed to secure them when they had been pinpointed.

Now, fortunately for Brooklyn's debt to Louisville, the top Jewish high school basketball players during the season of 1954-55 performed in Flatbush, Donald "Red" Goldstein, 6 feet 5 inches, and Alex Mantel, 6 feet 3 inches, were shoo-ins on the all-borough, all-city and all-state teams. Goldstein averaged 25.7 points per game during his career at Tilden high school. Mantel rang up 29.5 counters per game at Erasmus Hall High school.

GOLDSTEIN AND MANTEL could not hide their lights under a bushel basket. The University of Louisville coaches discovered them. The Jewish citizens, gifted with extraordinary eloquence, seduced the boys, who had enrolled at New York university, and persuaded them to choose Louisville for their alma mater.

Last season was a dream for Louisville Freshman Coach John Dromo. His charges prospered as never before. And Head Coach Peck Hickman also slept better of nights. The NIT crown secured last season conceivably could be retained by his serfs for another three years.

But early this month the dream took on the aspect of a nightmare. The NCAA suspended the University of Louisville for two years for giving "aid in excess" to athletes. It specifically cited the recruitment of Red Goldstein and Alex Mantel.

So, Brooklyn still hasn't paid its debt to Louisville.

SPORTS SHORTS... Onetime major league pitcher Marvin Rottblatt has been released outright by the Louisville Colonels... Jim Jacobs successfully defended his singles championship in the recent United States Handball Association tournament held in St. Louis... Los Angeles pitcher Hy Cohen has been optioned to Tulsa despite his impressive 5-0 record, his luck having been better than his pitching as an over-buxom 5.70 ERA will attest.

"Complaining that in this country a 'whole generation grew up not understanding the whole meaning of Judaism', Prof. Heschel said that though Jews today live 'in a great hour and great opportunity' Jewry has just not gotten 'enough people to deal with it.' He urged Jews to 'rediscover Judaism,' and explained that 'Judaism is an ultimate answer to the individual and to mankind.'

Goldmann's Proposal On UJA Unrealistic

By M. Z. FRANK

At the 24th Zionist Congress, grammatic speech, in which he held recently in Jerusalem, Dr. Nahum Goldmann delivered what appears to be intended as a proand warned that the forces working for assimilation are still stronger than the few over-publicized symptoms of a resurgence of Jewish consciousness. He proposed that the Zionists apply themselves to work for intensifying Jewish education in the Diaspora and for forging strong personal links between Zionists and Israel—links which may "culminate in Aliyah."

THE CONCRETE proposal, if it can be so termed, for educational activity that Dr. Goldmann made, is, to say the least, unrealistic. It says let the UJA give 10 per cent of its budget for day schools.

The UJA does not hand over 10 per cent of its budget so easily. Notwithstanding a lot of propaganda by Herut, Revisionists, General Zionists and Eliezer Livneh, the UJA does exercise some control over the disposition of the funds it collects for Israel. It has had its own auditors in Jerusalem for about three years now, and its leaders often voice their opinions to the leaders in Israel as to how the money ought to be spent.

UJA leadership is not too enthusiastic over the way some of the money is handled among the Zionist parties and institutions in America, but it does not think the sum is large enough to occupy its attention.

BUT IF THE UJA were confronted with a demand for allotting 10 per cent of its budget for day schools, there would be an awful to-do. But before even a demand could be made, the majority of Zionist parents would have to evince interest in day schools. So Goldmann's plan started off at the wrong end.

As for forging personal links between individual Zionists and Israel, the formula is a good one. Dr. Goldmann voiced it at a meeting of the American Zionist Council a year ago, and this writer noted it with approval. The question is: How is it to be done?

THERE ARE ample signs to show that Dr. Goldmann will be too busy with other matters to think of evolving practical methods for implementing his own program for the revival of the Zionist movement.

Since Dr. Goldmann is now both president of the World Zionist Organization and chairman of the Jewish Agency executive (and also president of the World Jewish Congress) and since he is going to spend most of his time in Jerusalem, he feels he will be in a better position to carry out some tasks he has been interested in for a long time, namely, attract non-Zionists to organized effort in behalf of Israel; negotiate with the Soviet bloc, and negotiate with the Arabs.

ON TOP OF THAT, Dr. Goldmann is no doubt going to become a good deal more active in Israeli politics than he has been. According to Boris Smolar in an article in The Jewish Daily Forward, Nahum Goldmann, having inherited the mantle of Weizmann in the Zionist Organization, is entitled to become, some day, president of Israel, and, having stepped into the shoes of David Ben-Gurion before 1948, he is entitled to become prime minister of Israel.

In other words, a modern Exilarch with an irrefutable claim to the modern throne of David.

BUT NO MATTER what Smolar thinks, and even if he should convince all the readers of the Forward, Goldmann will still have to work for his coveted position in Israel.

WHO, THEN, will be charged with the task of infusing Zionism with content (and I don't mean speeches about content)?

According to the list published by the JTA on May 22, the following members of the Jewish Agency executive in Jerusalem occupy positions which have some relation to the task.

David Beth-Aryah — head of religious education in the Diaspora.

Meir Grossman—head of the department for external relations (Diaspora?).

Eliyahu Dobkin — youth and halutzim.

Leib Dolzin—economic department.

Avraham Harman — information.

Zvi Lurie—organization. Zalman Shazar—culture and education in the Diaspora.

A committee for work in the Diaspora under Shazar, as chairman, includes Bet-Aryeh, Dolzin, Harman, Lurie and Kol.

We shall have to wait for more information before we can tell what to expect.

CONFEDERATE JEW'S LIFE BRILLIANTLY DOCUMENTED

BELOVED, by Vina Delmar, $3.95 (Harcourt Brace).

The crowning achievement of a novelist who achieved her first fame at 23 is her brilliantly documented, motivated, and personalized story of the life of Judah P. Benjamin, one-time United States Senator from Louisiana, then Secretary of War and Secretary of State of the Confederacy, and ultimately England's most distinguished barrister.

Born in the West Indies, Benjamin was reared in Savannah, expelled from Yale as the result of anti-Semitic, trumped-up charges of larceny, educated in the law in New Orleans (where he married the beautiful non-Jewish Natalie, who, even while conducting her adulteries in distant places, began her letters, "Beloved"), served the South well despite the magnificent ineptitudes of Jefferson Davis and Jew-hating generals, and then escaped to Europe. The history is exact, the dialogue scintillating, the love, Jewish, and political angles capitally presented.

MEMOIRS OF AMERICAN
JEWS, by Jacob Rader Marcus, Vol. 3, $4.00 (Jewish Publication Society).

This is the third of the personal records—in letters, biographical accounts, and sections of history in which the writers participated—collected and annotated by Professor Marcus.

The period covered by the three volumes, 1775-1865, here is largely concerned with Civil War episodes and characters. Their words are included even though too large a portion of the writers were assimilatory Jews. For the material is of importance to any study of American Jewish history.

Isaac Mayer Wise writes of his experiences in the new land; and there are a Rothschild, two Phillips (he was a unionist and his wife a bitter secessionist), a Gratz, Simon Baruch (father of our Baruch), Samuel Gompers, and other wielders of personal pens. There are a number of old illustrations.

Dr. Marcus is to be commended not only on his diligence and excellent choices, but on his ability to select material that is highly readable as well as of academic value.

JEWISH POST PUBLICATIONS: Rosenheim Foundation, 257 Seven Sisters Road, London N4.

Three small paper-bound books, from London, represent traditional viewpoints in Judaism, and do it very well.

The holiday essays and sermons by Rabbi Victor Schonfeld, already mentioned here, are called "Life's Purpose." Then there are childhood "Memories of Frankfurt," by Herman Schwab—a reversion to a dead past. The philosophy of Isaac Breuer is taught in "The People of the Torah," selected essays. Later additions to the series will be concerned with Hirsch, Birnbaum, and Rosenheim.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR

Readers may recall a front-page story in our issue of April 6, 1956 about Prof. William Ernest Hocking, 83-year-old former Harvard professor whose letter attacking the loyalty of U. S. Jews appeared in the New York Herald-Tribune of March 4, and either before or after in a number of newspapers throughout the U. S., including the Indianapolis Star.

We called Prof. Hocking by telephone, and he revealed to us that although he didn't send the letter to the Indianapolis daily paper, there were three organizations who sent the letters out—with his permission, of course. In other words this was an organized campaign to defame the Jews of the U. S.

IT NEVER OCCURRED to us to ask him if one of these groups was the American Council for Judaism. Much as we have been undeceived by the Council in recent months, we couldn't imagine that they would be guilty of this kind of attack on Jews, and although they might silently applaud the action, they couldn't possibly have been part of it.

But it seems that we have much to learn about the Council's depravity.

In the special conference newsletter on the 12th annual conference of the Council recently in Chicago appears the bland admission from the Council's vice president, George L. Levison, of San Francisco, that the organization had distributed Hocking's letter. Mr. Levison described the letter as "a stirring appeal to candidates for American political office to divorce themselves from their subservience to Zionist pressures."

THE ONE THOUGHT that seems to bother us is why there wasn't immediately a large number of resignations from the Council. It is clear that the Council will stop at nothing, and that there is absolutely no limit to which it will go in order to prove that U. S. Jews are disloyal when they espouse the Zionist cause.

THE PEOPLE who are now leading the Council are nothing less than maniacs. They have lost their sense of balance and of decency and nothing seems too low for them to employ if it will harm the U. S. Zionists, which in effect is the U. S. Jewish community.

If the Council will congratulate itself for sending out Prof. Hocking's letter, then where will it stop, and who is to be the judge of how far the Council will go? Who is there in the Council's official family that can guide them

CONFIRMATION ERRORS

Confirmation has become universal in the United States Jewish community to the point that in a good many cities all three wings of Judaism—Reform, Conservative and even Orthodox—now use this ritual as a device to retain our youth in organized classes of Jewish instruction until at least the middle of the high school period.

But there is an objection to Confirmation which, unless it is removed, will cause it to degenerate in the same way that Bar Mitzva has in the past two decades.

There is little that can be done about the bad aspects of the bar mitzva ceremony, since the child at that age is hardly ready in our civilization to make any kind of commitment or even compose an intelligent thought. This was not true in other centuries where the exigencies of living at that time made it necessary for the young people to mature more quickly.

But by Confirmation, the youngsters are quite aware of life and have already developed to the point where they are not alone able to make judgments on mathematical-type problems, but in connection with morality and others of a more profound nature.

There is no reason then why the Confirmation ceremony should be a high school stage play produced in the synagogue. There is no reason why, as at bar mitzva, the rabbi or teacher should write the speech and the Jewish parts of the ceremony should be memorized as rote.

If there is any one trait that makes itself felt very quickly in young people it is their ability to detect artificiality. They are quickly embittered by sham, and their sense of justice is razor-edged. Therefore, their first adult-like contact with the house of worship should not be one that leaves an indelible mark on their impressionable minds.

This is not a plea for perfection. The Confirmand and the Confirmation ceremony can hardly be pulled out of their context of Jewish life and synagogue life of today. Yet it is a plea for permitting the youngsters to do their own thinking and their own speech-making and their own planning for the Confirmation ceremony. Not only will it be more meaningful for them, but it might therefore be endowed with the kind of conviction and even commitment which is absolutely impossible when someone else, other than the Confirmands, does the work for them.

JEWISH PRISON INMATES

For some odd reason, The POST is read by Jewish inmates of several prisons around the United States. Originally, the request for these complimentary subscriptions came from rabbis who visited the prisoners and we've been content to continue the prison libraries on our mailing list.

In fact, and this is not the point of this editorial, this gives us an alibi with a distorted humorous twist when rabbis and others write in for complimentary subscriptions or for clergy rates. We explain that because of the high cost of gathering our news—since we are the only Jewish weekly which has its own correspondents throughout the Jewish world—we must ask every subscriber to pay the full subscription price. And then to make this point stick, we add that except for a few prison libraries and a few inmates of insane asylums, every other subscription to The POST is paid in full.

Be that as it may, we sometimes get into correspondence with some of the readers of The POST in these institutions, and we've discovered that the Jewish prison inmates are rarely visited by a rabbi and almost never by Jewish people who live in the city in which the prison is located.

We don't know how the prisoners of

There must be some way to convince the Council that it is not achieving its aims by its assault on the U. S. Jewish community.

CONTRACTOR FOUND FINALLY FOR F. L. WRIGHT'S TEMPLE

PHILADELPHIA (NJP)—After a somewhat discouraging year's nation-wide search, Beth Shalom Congregation has found a contractor able and willing to erect its new Frank Lloyd Wright-designed synagogue in suburban Elkins Park. Southwest. Beth Shalom officials found him in Oklahoma City, 1300 miles from Philadelphia.

Culwell, in his 50s, is one of the few builders in America not stumped by the designs of Wright, noted American architect who designed the new synagogue about two years ago. He was in Philadelphia last week for conferences with Beth Shalom officials and signed contracts to build the strikingly modernistic, hexagon-shaped edifice for $875,000 which is $125,000 more than the congregation raised as its original $750,000 allocation.

CULWELL breezily told Beth Shalom officials: "Relax. Your new house of worship will be delivered to you completely finished in eighteen months." He has set up office not far from the tract, and work starts on the synagogue early this month.

The Oklahoman is taking on a construction project that many in the building industry, not only in Greater Philadelphia but in the eastern part of the United States, shied away from because they couldn't follow or figure the project as designed by Wright.

In the construction trade it is rated a "good job." The money is sure. There would be a normal or better margin of profit. That is, if any other architect but Wright had designed the plans.

A YEAR AGO a score of contractors, including some of the largest ones, took out plans. But on bid day officials of Beth Shalom didn't receive one bid.

Frank Lloyd Wright had once more stumped the building experts with his intricate and unusual design. It was so complicated and so replete with unusual technical detail that builders either couldn't figure out his design or arrived at a cost estimate to insure themselves a profit.

One firm tendered an unofficial estimate of $1,500,000—double the amount Beth Shalom had set aside for the project.

MELVIN BRICKER, chairman of the building committee, and N. Herman Bornstein, construction committee chairman, then began the search that ended successfully with Culwell, who snapped up the opportunity.

He is an experienced hand at building Wright-designed projects that most other contractors

SHELACH LECHA:

Biblical Narrative At Its Best

By RABBI J. J. WEINSTEIN

Nowhere is the narrative mastery of the Bible more clearly shown than in these chapters dealing with the spying out of Canaan. Here each word bites with the precision of a steel drill, every verb works with clean, lean muscled strength. The austere economy of the language does not, however, strait-jacket imagination. It but gives it more room to prod the mind to capture subtle shades and profound overtones.

Moses commands twelve representatives, one from each tribe, to spy out the land to see whether the people are strong or weak, the cities fortified or unprotected. The spies return with a majority and a minority report.

The majority of ten admit indeed that the land is fruitful. They cannot deny the evidence of the giant clusters of grapes found in the land. Howbeit (it's the archaic form of but) the land eats up its inhabitants and the people are fierce, veritable giants and sons of giants and we were grasshoppers in our sight and in their sight, too.

THE WORKINGS of fear are wondrous to behold. Like those crazy mirrors in carnival fun houses, they exaggerate and diminish the same object. The rich land becomes a consuming land; the inhabitants become elephantine, as the invaders become locusts.

Caleb, son of Jephunneh, and Joshua, son of Nun, give the minority report: "The land which we passed through to spy it out, is an exceeding good land. If the Lord delight in us, then He will bring us into this land, and give it unto us—a land which floweth with milk and honey. Only rebel not against the Lord, neither fear ye the people of the land, for they are bread for us; their defense is removed from over them, and the Lord is with us, fear them not."

THE PEOPLE were taken in by the majority report. That report justified their own craven fears and their own nostalgia for the fleshpots of Egypt and the "security" of slavery.

They were intent on stoning Joshua and Caleb. And the Lord was so wroth with the people that He wanted to destroy them there and then and build His chosen people anew out of Moses.

But Moses, assuming a familiarity bred in a long and difficult companionship in misery, prevailed on the Lord to have compassion on this people. The Lord lets Himself be persuaded.

HE WILL preserve the people so that their seed may inherit the land and the mission that goes with the land. Moses resolutely refuses to do what Jesus agreed to do so many generations later—to become a surrogate for the people. And this difference accounts in some measure for the difference between the Christian emphasis on individual salvation and the Jewish insistence on the immortality of the people.

look upon as "untouchable." He recently completed a 19-story office building in Bartlesville, Okla., that was designed by Wright.

When Culwell quoted his $875,000 cost figure, officials of Beth Shalom, wearied by their search, agreed to hike their allocation $125,000.

When Any Arab Here's In Need, Count on Jews as Friends Indeed

MINNEAPOLIS—When an Arab studying in this country got into trouble, it was Jews, and not other Arabs, who helped him out.

According to Louis Greene, writing in The American Jewish World of Minneapolis, the Arab, Gamal Sheerif, an Egyptian teacher who came to the University of Minnesota as a graduate student in education, had been subsidized by the Egyptian government.

Recently, however, the $100-a-month stipend was cut in half, with the explanation the $50 withheld would be considered Sheerif's contribution to the arming of Egypt.

Sheerif objected, writing the officials that he was a pacifist and wouldn't give money to buy arms. Their insistence and his persistence resulted in his $100-a-month allowance being cut off entirely.

Sheerif, seeing a want ad for a janitor at the Hillel House, applied and got the job, and is reported doing such satisfactory work that his new-found Jewish friends hope he can stay on indefinitely.

Resents Pressure, Israel Is Powerful, Dulles Tells Silver

CLEVELAND (NJP)—Secretary of State Dulles might never approve of the sale of United States arms to Israel.

Two of his personal opinions on the subject were revealed by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver in an off-the-record talk he made before his temple's Men's Club.

Dulles told Rabbi Silver, when they met recently with President Eisenhower, that Israel could probably defeat any Arab attack that came in the near future.

SILVER

Dulles also feels that too much pressure is being exerted on him to make the sale possible. He doesn't want to make it appear that he is yielding to pressure.

Silver said that he answered Dulles on both counts.

First he pointed out to Dulles that Israel couldn't win no matter what the outcome of a war because all of her cities and other developments would be in ruins.

He also suggested that pressure is common today on all important subjects. Refraining from action can be worse than appearing to yield when the cause is just, Silver added.

The rabbi also implied that Dulles has never gotten over attacks made on him while he was running for senator that accused him of being an anti semite. Silver said that these accusations were and still are completely false.

Israel's President Ben Zvi, in a letter to Eisenhower that Silver delivered, requested the opportunity to buy U. S. arms and thanked Eisenhower for his interest in the Middle East's problems.

DULLES

COLLEGE STUDENTS GET FIRST-HAND BIAS SUBJECT

ATLANTA (NJP)—A class studying propaganda at Georgia Tech here recently had first-hand anti-Semitic literature with which to work.

Students at one of the dormitories found a handbill by the National Anti-Jewish party posted on their bulletin board and turned it over to the faculty.

Later, the bill was used by the press here that the effectiveness of the group to date has been nil because its very viciousness has repelled any following.

THE DISCOVERY of the bill was the first public indication of the existence of the "party."

According to The Southern Israelite, the bill, a closely printed sheet, carried the "pictures of a number of persons alleged to be 'fanatical Jews' responsible for Communism, treason, sabotage, world domination, mongrelization", and varied other acts.

THE OBJECTIVE of the "party" was said to be "to preserve the white race against 'Jewish Communism' by the formation of 'a third Party devoted solely to the best interests of the white race.'"

The proposed formation of the party is said to have been known for some time to the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League. A spokesman for the league told

Committee, B'nai B'rith Evade Desegregation Issue: Toubin

NEW YORK (NJP)—Isaac Toubin, acting director of the American Jewish Congress, this week charged the American Jewish Committee and the B'nai B'rith with keeping silent on the segregation issue.

Reached in St. Louis where he was attending a convention, Toubin said these were the two groups whom he had criticized in a speech last week in New Haven, Conn., but had not named.

Explaining his position, the Congress executive made the point that although he is not ready to concede that keeping silent is the best position to take at this time, there is no place in the U. S. Jewish community where all bodies can get together and discuss what the U. S. Jewish view should be.

Toubin most likely to referring to the withdrawal several years ago of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the American Jewish Committee from the National Community Relations Advisory Council, the over-all U. S. Jewish body for civic protective questions.

ASKED IF THE Committee and the ADL had not appeared before the Supreme Court when the segregation issue was being argued, Toubin said that was so, but added that since that time neither organization had publicly taken a position in the matter. He said the American Jewish Committee has adopted a resolution on civil rights at its last convention, but purposefully had not publicized it.

As for the B'nai B'rith, Toubin said he knew of no civil rights decision at its recent triennial convention in Washington, D. C.

Toubin explained that the position Jews of the United

ISAAC TOUBIN

Only One Position Possible

States are being placed in, as a result of the inability to thrash out the matter and reach some decision, is "irresponsible."

IF SILENCE is the right approach, he asked, then how does it help the situation if the American Jewish Congress or the Jewish War Vets or any national Jewish group comes out for desegregation.

His own position, Toubin said, was that whatever Northern Jews do will make little difference as far as the position of the Jews of the South are concerned. He said he didn't believe that the Southern Citizens Councils would act any differently toward the Jews of the South, even if United States Jewry took a hands-off position in the matter.

As for the Negro, he went on, such a position would make him feel that he is friendless in the fight for equality, and would also do violence to the Jewish view which is solidly opposed to prejudice and injustice.

TOUBIN said the feeling of some national Jewish organizations in the matter must be that if they speak out for desegregation they will harm the position of both the Jew and the Negro.

In his address last week at the second annual dinner meeting of the community relations committee of the New Haven Jewish Community Relations Council, Toubin noted that the two organizations have been "Significantly silent" on the issue.

"The White Citizens Councils of the South apparently have not only blackmailed their Southern Jewish neighbors, but have effectively silenced two national Jewish organizations which pride themselves on their defense of the civil rights of all," he declared. "How can we achieve a moral society if we ourselves are guilty of immoral behavior?"

"IS IT NOT immoral to pose as a defender of civil rights when one applies for an allocation from a Jewish welfare fund in the North and then to have another set of answers when one applies for an allocation from a Jewish welfare fund in the South?" he asked. It is not enough to claim that the Jewish community of the South is being held hostage in the civil rights struggle. Even if that were true, which it is not, the Jews of America should be the very last to consider the desertion of their Negro brothers in this struggle for human equality."

Toubin emphasized that "no crisis is more critical for the welfare of America than the just and full correction of the evil treatment accorded the Negro. It is a pernicious national sin; it has dangerous international implications; the white man should dread the retribution he has accrued, and there is a great moral and religious decision at stake for all of us."

THE POSITION of the Jewish community on "this moral and social crisis should be as unequivocal as it is inevitable," he said. "Our religious teachings, our historic experience, our human instinct, our concern for America's welfare should compel us to seek for the Negro the same justice which, on so many bitter occasions, has been denied to us. No one should minimize the dilemma that confronts the Jewish communities in the South, but their plight, real or imagined, cannot relieve us of making clear where we stand."

STUDENT MAY LOSE SIGHT AFTER VICIOUS BEATING

CLEVELAND (NJP)—Wielding metal weapons and shouting: "Jew! Jew!" a gang of hoodlums last week beat into unconsciousness Isaac Gelbord, a 16-year-old Australian studying at a yeshiva here.

At last report, according to the Cleveland Jewish Independent here, doctors at Mt. Sinai hospital feared that Gelbord's vision may be permanently injured.

The victim, a student at Telshe college, was attached as he was walking near the 105th st. college, was attacked as he was staying. He had been taking a teachers' course at the institution and had planned to return to Telshe college, which is in the process of moving to another neighborhood, had planned to have the move completed by July.

The identity of the ruffians who attacked Gelbord have not been determined by the police.

JWV Rejects Request To Aid Nazi Soldiers

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NJP) — A request from a German war veterans group asking the Jewish War Veterans of the United States to use their influence to secure "charitable" treatment for twenty-one German soldiers now imprisoned for life was rejected this week.

Reubin Kaminsky, JWV president, told the German organization that his group would not act because "the men are responsible for the death and destruction of millions of innocent lives. . . ." He added that their case had been considered by various boards of appeals, and already their death sentences had been commuted.

Eisenhowers Considered Old Friends

Mamie Welcomes A New Siegel Into 'This Wonderful World'

NEWARK, N. J. (NJP) — The Siegels of near-by West Orange consider the Eisenhowers of Washington as "old friends."

The friendship started when Mrs. Vickie Siegel visited President Eisenhower at the White House and gave him a portrait she had painted of him. Several days later he sent her a "thank you" note.

Last fall, Mrs. Siegel, whose husband, Martin, is a builder here, sent the President some paints which she thought he might need while recuperating from his heart attack. Eisenhower replied with another note.

Several weeks ago, Mrs. Siegel gave birth to a son, Bradford Cohen Siegel. Last week she displayed a note from the First Lady. It said:

"Welcome, Bradford Cohen Siegel, to this wonderful world. The President joins me in sending congratulations to your parents and our very best wishes to you always."

Three Special Enrollment Sessions Announced By Camp Kiwaca; Counsellors, Staff Selected

Three special sessions for enrollment of boys and girls for the first two periods in Camp Kiwaca, summer day camp of the Jewish Community Center, have been set aside by Max Casper, day camp director.

The three periods are: This Sunday, June 3, 1 to 4 p. m.; Monday, June 4, 6:30 to 9 p. m., and Tuesday, June 5, 2 to 5 p. m.

For the first two periods, only a few openings remain, most of these being for 7- and 8-year-old girls. The enrollment limit for each period this year is 70 campers.

The first period starts Monday, June 25, 10 days after vacation begins.

MRS. ROBERT MARKS, chairman of the Day Camp committee, is pleased to announce a full staff of very enthusiastic counsellors and unit heads, including a large number of recruits from our own Center membership.

Mrs. Gloria Schwartz, as program director, will have as unit supervisors Maurice Schankerman, local teacher in the public schools, and Mrs. Hannah Step, teacher recently arrived from Omaha, Neb. Mrs. Janet Brown, former group leader at the Center and also a public school teacher, will be crafts resource specialist to the counsellors.

Coming up from Indiana University as counsellors will be Mel Cantor, returning for his third season at camp, Sandra Lutz, Ruth Fischel and Dick Weisfeld. Babs Glazer will be coming back from Northwestern University.

IRIS REGENBOGEN, coming from Penn State University with three season's day camp experience, will further enhance the camp activities, as will Sandra Orbison, Butler University student majoring in education.

Several mature Shortridge high school graduates will join the staff this season: Allan Zukerman, Fran Calderon, and Doris Muschel. Barbara Axelrod will again be a junior counsellor. A male junior counsellor, preferably a high school sophomore or junior, is yet to be appointed.

Parents of all the campers will have an opportunity to get acquainted with the entire day camp staff at an evening reception scheduled for Wednesday evening, June 20, at the Center, during the five days of the pre-camp staff training institute.

THIS YEAR, a training program for potential counsellors will be initiated on a twice-a-week basis. The trainees will receive formal training in various resource skills and join in discussions of the fundamental principles of group leadership and understanding of child behavior.

For their second weekly session, they will be assigned as volunteers to help the staff with the various program activities. The only prerequisites are membership in the Center, indication of sincere interest in the program, and graduation at least from grade school.

Ten girls at present have requested this leadership training. They are Marilyn Bassler, Phyllis Bernstein, Rose Budnick, Elaine Gilbert, Deanna Glasel, Charlene Greenberger, Ellen Joseph, Aileen Meyers, Evelyn Oakley and Janet Satinsky.

American Jews Pay Handsomely for Judaism, Says Rabbi Robert Gordis

LONDON (NJP)—A reporter for The Jewish Chronicle here asked Rabbi Robert Gordis of Long Island to compare British and United States Jewry, and got a choice morsel for his pains.

Rabbi Gordis told the reporter that in Great Britain, Jews loved their Judaism and lived by it, but were unwilling to pay for it. In the United States, on the other hand, the situation was almost the reverse. Some Jews lived by their Judaism, more loved it, and many more were ready to pay for it.

The noted rabbi, who is on the faculty of both Columbia University and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America quoted a figure of synagogue affiliation in the United States of 2,500,000.

GORDIS

Following through with the comparison, Dr. Gordis said that a Hebrew teacher in New York could probably command as high a salary as the highest-paid rabbi in London, even after taking into consideration the difference in the cost of living.

He said that British rabbis, teachers and other spiritual leaders were grossly underpaid, and that salaries paid by American congregations would be considered fabulous by British standards.

As to kashrut, Dr. Gordis was quoted by the paper as saying it was practically non-existent in the United States. "There was complete chaos, even corruption and deception," Rabbi Gordis was quoted as saying by the London weekly.

"What organization there was, he stated, was largely in the hands of the rapidly dwindling few of the older, Yiddish-speaking rabbis. Although spiritual leaders like himself were concerned about the situation, Dr. Gordis admitted that there was at present no sign of improvement."

Rabbi Gordis praised British Jewry for its organization, its observance of kashrut and its closely knit synagogal organization.

In a lecture before the World Jewish Congress, Rabbi Gordis painted an optimistic picture of American Jewry. He said there were definite signs of a religious and cultural revival. Jewish education, he said, showed signs of improvement in both numbers and quality.

He praised the Jewish Chronicle as a news weekly, and said that although there was a great improvement in the number and quality of American Jewish periodicals, there was nothing approaching the British paper even remotely.

NEW PAPER CHARGES BIAS AGAINST COLORED JEWS

TEL AVIV (NJP) — Discrimination by the white Jews was charged in a new weekly publication in Hebrew and French called Hameore. The weekly is backed by a group of Oriental Jews.

The paper charged that there are practically no Sefardic and Oriental Jews in the arts, theatre, professions and among writers, while only children of white Jews study in the secondary schools.

It added that although half of Israel's population is not white, the Colored Jews are represented by only eight out of 120 members of the Knesset and the same number of representatives on the executive council of Histadrut.

The paper's editorial called attention to Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's statement that: "There should be no institution in Israel without the participation of non-Ashkenazi Jews. . . ."
